Grief Encounter

Small charities, measured in terms of finance, should be given a loud voice as we have to continually compete against the larger charities with large administrative support, technical support on hand and marketing budgets. We rely on part-time staff and volunteers, yet are expected to have the similar financial, legal and governance structures.

Most smaller charities due to passion, commitment and goodwill punch far above their weight, especially in terms of a flexible approach. Our bereaved families would never receive the support we offer from the NHS.

Dr Shelley Gilbert MBE

CEO,
Grief Encounter